

THINK ECOLOGICALLY
IT'S THE SELFISH
THING TO DO

I eat food fed by good soil.

I drink water that has been replenished and filtered
through rain and earth.

I breathe air cleaned
by trees taller and
older than myself

All of this requires nature
be healthy.

I don't need to sacrifice my life for the planet, but I'll be killing myself if I don't put some care into its preservation. No
abstraction needed,
no moralism
required. Just an understanding that I'm a part of the ecosystem, not external to it.

Since the industrial revolution, shit's gotten bad. Plastics fill the oceans, runoff from industrial farming poisons groundwater, chemical dumping and emissions contaminate everything - all of it comes back to us in our food, cups, and lungs. What happens to our ecosystems directly affects us.

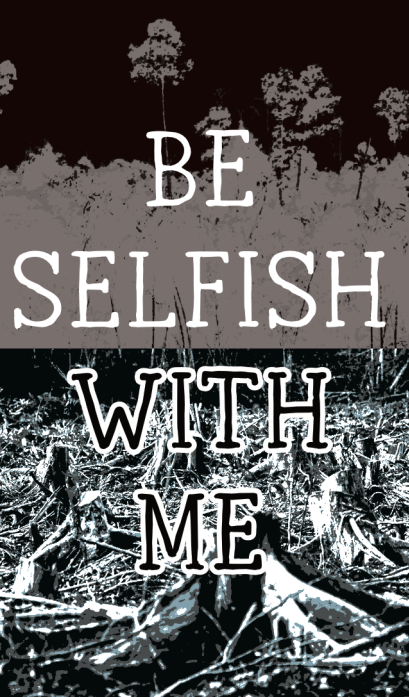

I'm just one guy, though. I can reuse and upcycle, I can practice restorative gardening and husbandry on the plot of land I'm on, I can bring to light all the fucked up shit that's happened thanks to industry. But at the end of the day? I alone am not enough.

It's a selfish desire to want to not only survive but thrive, and I'm selfish. I want to play, I want to be healthy, I want to see beauty. This isn't possible with extraction over restoration, this isn't possible with production over life, this isn't possible with industry that destroys the very thing I rely on to survive, this isn't possible if the planet fucking dies.

I know you want these things too. You want to thrive, you want to enjoy the minuscule amount of time you have in life. You eat, drink, and breathe too. You're selfish like me. You're an animal like me. Whether you're in a luxurious high rise or sleeping in a ditch every night, your life and freedom is dependent on the earth and its health.

So I implore you...

A black and white photograph of a forest floor. The foreground is filled with dry leaves, twigs, and small plants. In the background, there are several tall, thin trees with dense foliage. A semi-transparent rectangular box is overlaid on the upper half of the image, containing the text "BE SELFISH WITH ME" in a white, serif font. The word "WITH" is in a larger, bolder font than the others.

BE SELFISH
WITH ME